Description

For sale is a fine carved ivory relief, likely dating from the late 17th or early 18th century, depicting a male figure in a statuary pose wearing luxurious 17th-century attire, including a stiff ruff, lace, and a staff of authority. The piece is of Flemish or German manufacture, characteristic of the Kunstkammer and private collections of the period, and is attributed to Charles I of England. It is currently mounted in a contemporary wooden frame, visible in the photographs, and is in excellent overall condition. The item comes with a CITES certificate, ensuring compliance with export regulations.
