covers only the frame of the icon. And the "Riza" which covers the background of the icon and leaves only the bodies of the figures visible. **
The icon of Our Lady of Kazan is particularly revered by the Orthodox Church, especially the Russian Orthodox Church. It dates from 1572. It is also venerated by Catholics, although its feast day is exclusively inscribed in the Orthodox liturgical calendar. Two large cathedrals are dedicated to it in Moscow and Saint Petersburg. It is celebrated on July 21 and November 4.
