Description

Large Two-Section Fir Bookcase - 19th Century.

This substantial two-section fir bookcase, dating from the 19th century, is beautifully proportioned and elegant. The upper section features wide glass doors opening onto numerous shelves, ideal for displaying books or decorative objects. The uprights are adorned with discreet carvings at the top, lending a simple and authentic charm to the piece. The lower section, enclosed by solid doors, offers ample storage space. The fir wood has a beautiful antique patina, with marks of age that attest to the piece's authenticity. A bookcase with character, perfect for a classic interior, a country house, a library, or an office. Period: 19th century. Good overall condition, with wear and signs of use consistent with age. Shipping or delivery available upon request.
