Description

Ornamental painting with a vase of flowers and cherubs, late 19th century

Oil on canvas in a new carved and gilded wooden frame with a shaped mat, 84 x 67 cm

Excellent condition

The painting features a refined, decorative composition, typical of late 19th-century painting, characterized by elegant references to Rococo and Neo-Baroque styles. At the center of the scene is a richly adorned vase containing a polychrome floral bouquet of roses and garden flowers, rendered with delicate chromatic nuances and attention to botanical detail.

In the upper section, cherub figures and idealized architectural elements emerge, immersed in a barely sketched landscape, contributing to the work's evocative, 18th-century atmosphere.

The background, characterized by shades of blue and green, lends depth and luminosity to the overall composition, highlighting the central subject and strengthening the compositional balance. The brushstrokes appear soft and controlled, with particular attention to decorative effects and the rendering of gilding.

The work fits into the eclectic and decorative vein of late 19th-century painting, a period of renewed popularity for Rococo styles and ornamental compositions intended for bourgeois and aristocratic settings
