Description

Large plaster bust with a polychrome patina imitating porphyry, representing Marcus Junius Brutus, known as Brutus. This is a model made after the famous original white marble bust housed in the Capitoline Museums in Rome. The high-quality patina offers a remarkable trompe-l'oeil effect evoking porphyry. An inscription appears on the front: "Brutus the Younger - Capitoline Museums (?)". Marcus Junius Brutus, born around 85 BC in Rome and died on October 23, 42 BC in Philippi, was a Roman senator, jurist, and philosopher of the late Republic. Son of Servilia, mistress of Julius Caesar, he is famous for having delivered the fatal blow to Caesar during his assassination on March 15, 44 BC.
