The photographs were taken with the glass in place, hence some reflections. Henri Privat-Livemont (1861-1936, Brussels) was a Belgian painter, draftsman, and poster artist. With his refined and elegant compositions, he remains one of the great masters of sgraffito alongside Paul Cauchie and Adolphe Crespin. A symbolist, Privat-Livemont was drawn to the Art Nouveau aesthetic from a very early age. His numerous posters, often award-winning, earned him the nickname "the Belgian Mucha." After studying at the Saint-Josse Academy in
