Description

A rare and lyrical embodiment of French Art Nouveau craftsmanship, this exquisite mirror, signed by the elusive A.H. Villaket, dates to around 1910. The piece of art showcases the movement's fascination with nature, elegance, and ornamental fluidity. Framed in richly patinated brass over a wooden base, the piece is adorned with stylized flamingos, their elongated necks and poised silhouettes forming a rhythmic motif that evokes both serenity and sophistication.

The frame's surface is alive with embossed detail: scrolling foliage, avian forms, and delicate floral accents rendered with a jeweler's precision. Inset glass cabochons punctuate the composition, adding subtle glimmers of color and enhancing the mirror's jewel-like presence. The reddish-brown textured background provides a warm contrast to the golden brass, heightening the visual depth and tactile richness.

Villaket's signature, discreetly placed, affirms the mirror's artistic pedigree. Though little is known of the maker, the quality of execution suggests a workshop attuned to the decorative arts revival flourishing in early 20th-century France--where mirrors were not merely functional but poetic objects, designed to reflect both light and beauty.

This piece would have graced a refined boudoir or salon, its aesthetic aligned with the organic elegance of Hector Guimard and the sensual stylization of Gallé. Today, it offers collectors and designers a rare opportunity to acquire a work that bridges fine metalwork, glass artistry, and sculptural design.

Condition: Mirror plate shows age-related spotting; frame with gentle wear and patina consistent with age. Structurally sound and visually striking.

Provenance: Private French collection
