Description

This extraordinary piece of furniture represents an unmissable opportunity for the most discerning collectors. First of all, the bed embodies the essence of 17th-century Sardinian cabinet-making, a period when walnut wood was masterfully crafted for the most prestigious residences. Furthermore, the rich carved decoration blends harmoniously with the period gilding, creating a chromatic contrast that radiates a regal light. For this reason, placing such a piece in your master bedroom means possessing a fragment of noble history. Structural Quality and Rarity Regarding its current state, the object is in good general condition and appears solid and stable on its feet. Despite the passage of time, woodworm is currently inactive; however, the piece requires a light conservative restoration to
