Description

Very pretty and richly decorated interior of a wedding globe from the Napoleon III period. The lower part is richly decorated with gold-plated brass tinsel depicting various flowers, stylised ribbons and a dove, all embellished with bevelled mirrors. The bridal crown and bouquet are preserved on a pink silk cap, now worn and faded by time. The upper part features a decoration composed of gold-plated flower-shaped tinsel, mirrors and ribbons, topped by a gold-plated dove holding a crown and overlooking a mirror, a rosette and a central pendant. The orange blossoms on the crown and bouquet are made of wax, in keeping with 19th-century custom. This globe interior comes from the collection of a collector who assembled thirteen wedding globes of different sizes, shapes and interior designs,
