Description

A Louis XVI period cherrywood commode, featuring an elegant molded front with a subtle central projection, highlighting the architectural rigor characteristic of this era. It opens with three large drawers in the front, each adorned with brass drop handles and heart-shaped keyhole escutcheons, complete with a working key and lock. A discreet dust cover separates the drawers, protecting the contents while enhancing the quality of the craftsmanship. The square, fluted uprights terminate simply in slightly raised square feet, giving the piece a stable base and a slender appearance. The whole is crowned with a bluish-grey breccia marble top, whose projections on the front and sides precisely follow the lines of the piece, emphasizing the harmony between structure and ornamentation.
