Description

A Louis XIII four-door buffet, 17th century, in solid walnut. It opens with four doors featuring molded and carved panels with geometric cross motifs, characteristic of the Louis XIII style, as well as two drawers in the central section, fitted with antique iron pulls. The structure is entirely solid wood, with traditional joinery. The interior has antique shelves, offering ample storage space. The piece rests on a molded base and is topped with an overhanging top. It has a beautiful antique patina, with wear and signs of age consistent with its age, without compromising its sturdiness.
