Description

A wooden architectural sculpture depicting a stylized dragon, reclining in a sinuous pose. The animal has an expressive head with an open mouth, a swirling mane, and a slender body ending in a tail coiled in an ornamental pattern. The wings are folded in line with the back, blending into the surrounding foliage. The wood has a brown patina with traces of former polychromy, notably black in the recesses. Several visible perforations suggest an architectural or decorative function, perhaps as a support or furniture ornament.
