Description

Elegant Venetian mirror from the late 19th century, richly decorated with flowers and foliage in blown and hot-shaped glass, distinguished by a refined iridescent opalescent effect of remarkable brilliance and visual impact.The composition, entirely Venetian in taste, features floral appliqués and scrolling elements in transparent glass, harmoniously arranged along the shaped outline of the mirror. The quality of the glass, the complexity of the workmanship and the chromatic refinement attest to a high-level production, intended for a refined interior setting.The iridescent glass used for the appliqués belongs to a type whose traditional production was gradually abandoned during the 20th century and effectively ceased by the 1950s-1960s, making such pieces particularly sought after
