Description

Portrait of a Feathered Actor, Oil on Canvas, Early 18th Century. Large portrait of a theatrical actor, probably from the commedia dell'arte or unslt as they were once called! This is an important oil on canvas dating from the first half of the 18th century, depicting a man in theatrical costume, wearing a feathered hat, a large red cape over a white-checked doublet edged in blue, and a book in his hands. Perhaps he is also a playwright! The face is rather round with a thin mustache, and the gaze is turned to the right, with a slight squint, fixing the viewer. A very jovial man, the painter has managed to give this portrait a slightly caricatured and perhaps slightly humorous aspect. A very lively and spirited portrait, funny and amusing, full of life! A southern work. The canvas was relined in the
