Description

Memoirs of the Marquise de Sévigné Volume 2 (1856), 4 (1865), 5 (1875) and 6 (1877) The memoirs of a woman in power, closest to the King. Among the greatest figures of the seventeenth century, the Marquise de Sévigné or Madame de Sévigné was one of the most observant and epistolary. Grand lady of the royal court of Louis XIV, we still have her letters & memoirs today. She wielded the pen like no one else, and her writings are today part of French literature, as much for their classicism, as the way she described life & intrigues within the court in her time. Although incomplete, these books are an extraordinary resource in knowledge & literature, their appearance as well as their content being of a recognized writing beauty. They are all in very good condition with the exception of volume 2
