brushed with touches of red, navy blue, and black, which adds depth and contrast to the patterns. Materials: The use of metallic threads gives a shimmering effect, particularly visible in the light, highlighting the details of the design. Style: This piece is reminiscent of Ottoman or Persian silks, often used for wall decoration or as precious hangings in luxurious interiors. It is a refined and highly decorative piece. This wall hanging features a richly ornamented pattern inspired by Oriental and Persian art. It is made of silk, linen, and metallic threads, giving it a subtle sheen. Its style and the use of metallic threads evoke Ottoman or Persian influences, particularly prized between the 17th and 19th centuries for prestigious textiles. This antique piece dates from the early 19th century, when silks embroidered with metallic threads were highly valued for decorating palaces and aristocratic residences in the Orient and Europe.
