Description

Oil on canvas depicting a lively café scene with stylized figures in a festive, musical atmosphere, gathered around café tables under a light tinged with greens and blues. The palette, dominated by cool tones, is punctuated with luminous touches of yellow that emphasize the warmth of the scene and the vibrancy of the urban terraces. The canvas is signed lower right. Born in Metz in 1916, Camille Hilaire studied at the École Nationale des Beaux-Arts before becoming a professor at the Beaux-Arts in Nancy, and later in Paris. In 1948, he received a prize from the City of Venice. The public was captivated by his beautiful new harmonies of blues and greens, broken down into their multiple shades. His painting is neo-Cubist in style, employing effects of transparency in almost always vibrant color
