Description

A beautiful beach scene by Yves Wacheux, a 20th-century painter, depicting a group of people on the sand facing the sea, in a gentle and slightly hazy atmosphere. The artist captures a moment of simple, quiet life, where adults and children share the space between the sea and the dunes. The composition is built up of large areas of color, dominated by blues, beiges, and whites, creating a diffuse, almost misty light that evokes an off-season beach or a late afternoon. The figures are rendered with soft contours, giving the scene a poetic quality and an impression of absolute calm. The particularly subtle use of color and light reflects the artist's sensitivity. Work signed lower right. Presented in a wooden frame with geometric decoration.
