Description

An elegant mid-19th-century bar in washed oak, its front and sides clad in molded panels of the same wood. The back features doors and drawers, including a miniature one that opens from the side of the tap. It still has its original pewter basin, and the rest of the top has been replaced with zinc. The beer tap is also made of pewter and is a later addition. Its proportions are very harmonious. I particularly love the small door handles and that tiny drawer!
