Description

Period: Late Qing Dynasty (19th century).

Description: This exquisite sculpture, carved from exceptionally clear rock crystal, depicts a Taoist immortal. The work is distinguished by the fluidity of its lines and the delicacy of its details, particularly in the rendering of the swirling drapery and the traditional fan. In China, crystal symbolizes spiritual purity and longevity.

Presented on its original carved wooden base, this piece testifies to the exceptional craftsmanship of artisans from the late imperial period, combining technical virtuosity with poetic elegance.
