Description

Chic and practical, this Maison Jansen style side table in brass and black glass was made in France in the 1960s. Its classic neoclassical design is typical of the style of the French furniture company Jansen, emblematic of the mid-20th century. It features a glossy black glass top framed by a decorative openwork metal gallery. The table rests on four slender, fluted legs that taper beneath the stretcher. The legs are connected by an X-shaped stretcher near the base, meeting in the center of a decorative pinecone finial, which adds a touch of elegance. A classic of mid-20th-century French design.
