Description

A mid-century German Mosaik sculptural coffee table by Berthold Müller, dating from the 1960s. The tabletop is composed of small, hand-cut, sand-colored ceramic tiles arranged in a flowing, harmonious pattern. An abstract decoration of gold, black, and purple glass stones is integrated into this tile motif, adding depth and contrast. This decoration features elements that differ from the base stones, giving it a sculptural and highly elegant appearance. The plate is edged with a 3.5 cm wide brushed brass band and stands on four conical, black lacquered brass legs with accentuated brass bases (diameter 4.5 cm). Berthold Müller-Oerlinghausen (1893-1979) was a German sculptor specializing in mosaics. In the 1960s and 1970s, Müller worked as a freelance designer and created a series of
