Description

A beautiful, generously proportioned facade medallion depicting the god Bacchus in high relief, patinated in soft pink terracotta, originating from a château in Castres and made at the end of the 18th century in the workshops of Castelnaudary. This large profile of the god of intoxication and wine, intended as a facade decoration for a wine estate, has been kept as an interior decoration, as evidenced by its beautiful glaze. Executed with gentle lines, this beautiful kiln-fired impression has undeniable decorative appeal due to its size and its "antique" representation. The thick material boasts beautiful color nuances that stand out with the patina. It is backed with marbled paper and an inventory label, a carefully chosen "Neo-classical" decoration of exceptional quality, reflecting the
