Description

A very pretty pair of Louis XV style bergère chairs in natural waxed beechwood, dating from the very late 19th/early 20th century (circa 1900). The two side rails, as well as the front rail of the seat rail, are deeply shaped and feature elaborate carving of foliage and shells. The armrests are covered with sleeves, and both sides of the chairs are upholstered in solid fabric, revealing the entire armrest support. The backs are flat, with a straight top and the entire backrest covered in fabric. The upholstery is in very good condition; it is firm and very comfortable. However, we note that the upholstery shows signs of wear, with
