Description

COD 01152A magnificent 18th-century French painting. This oil on canvas artwork depicts the halt of the mounted grenadiers of the King's Guard by Charles Parrocel (1688-1752), one of the most representative works of 18th-century French military painting. Born into an artistic family, he enlisted in the cavalry to gain a thorough understanding of military operations and specialized in battle scenes. In this composition, the King's elite soldiers are depicted taking a break at the military camp, a scene of repose among officers and mounted soldiers during a military campaign. This is a very high-quality contemporary copy of the original currently on display at the Louvre in Paris, presumably the work of a student or workshop of the artist. A painting of remarkable pictorial
