Description

Oil on paper, painted en plein air, depicting a young boy seated outdoors, dressed in peasant clothing and holding a stick. The scene, rendered with great naturalism, reflects a realistic and intimate approach characteristic of the second half of the 19th century. The work is distinguished by a free and vibrant brushstroke, a soft and nuanced palette, and a keen sense of observation of both the model and the surrounding landscape. The treatment of light, the simplicity of the composition, and the spontaneous pose of the subject suggest a study executed from life, likely during an outdoor sitting. This painting demonstrates a solid academic technique, closely aligned with naturalist research and the plein air tradition, which was very fashionable from the mid-19th
