Description

An Empire period cylinder desk in Cuban mahogany. The upper section opens to reveal three drawers and three compartments lined with braided leather. The cylinder reveals a pilastered interior with a sliding writing surface in braided leather, small drawers, and compartments. Bronze handles with dolphin heads. The lower section opens to reveal three drawers in the frieze and two side pull-out slides. The interior fittings and drawer bottoms are mahogany. The base consists of flat columns ending in claw feet and baluster stretchers. Original locks and a secret cylinder opening mechanism. Excellent condition. Early 19th century.
