Description

Victorian Gilt Brass and Cast Iron Umbrella Stand, England, circa 1880. Elegant and imposing, this Victorian umbrella stand embodies 19th-century English decorative arts. Crafted from finely worked gilt brass and resting on its original cast iron base, it offers eight compartments for umbrellas or walking sticks. The natural patina of the metal, subtly nuanced by time, lends the piece depth and authenticity, making it ideal for an entry hall, gallery, or to enrich a private collection. The combination of gilt brass and black cast iron creates a striking contrast, reflecting the Victorian taste for opulence and rigor. A rare piece, a testament to an era when utilitarian objects were transformed into works of art, this umbrella stand is an exceptional opportunity for lovers of historical
