Description

Probably German school, depicting a romantic landscape with a traveler. A very beautiful antique painting featuring a romantic landscape enlivened by a solitary figure seen from behind, walking through a rocky valley dominated by tall trees. The composition is organized around a play of light and shadow; a luminous opening in the center reveals a mountainous horizon, while the dark masses of trees and rocks powerfully frame the scene. The iconography of the Wanderer--a figure dear to German tradition--lends the work a symbolic and introspective dimension, inherited from 19th-century Romanticism. The brushwork is vibrant in the rocks, more blended in the skies and foliage, with a warm palette of browns, ochres, and deep greens, typical of German schools. Beautiful old patina, relined, mounted on
