With her graceful pose and refined movement, she fully embodies the ideal of classical beauty sought during the Neoclassical period. The model is directly inspired by the famous composition by Antonio Canova (1757-1822), who created four versions of this work between 1796 and 1817. The first, executed between 1796 and 1799, is now in the Neue Pinakothek in Munich. This figure is considered one of the major examples of neoclassical sculpture, remarkable for the purity of its lines and the harmony of its proportions.
