Description

Circa 1920-1925, France. A stunning evening gown in pink silk rep embroidered with pearls and sequins by Maison Rolf & Cie in Paris, dating from the Roaring Twenties. The dress features thin straps, a low waist, and a blonde lace bodice accented with peplum trim, echoed at the shoulders. A blouson effect is achieved with a wide rosette at the waist. The design is inspired by Mayan art, which was fashionable during this period of enthusiasm for ethnic-inspired styles. Rich embroidery on pink silk rep features a geometric pattern alternating checks and diamonds, embroidered with iridescent sequins, mother-of-pearl beads, and gold thread. Veined leaves in iridescent celluloid accompany the movement of walking or dancing, such as the Foxtrot! The bodice is lined with cream silk
