Description

Early 19th Century Empire Mahogany Console.
This very elegant Empire period console is crafted from solid mahogany and flame mahogany veneer, resting on four straight, square-sectioned legs, characteristic of the Empire style. The feet are adorned with finely chased gilt-bronze rings and sabots, providing a refined contrast to the warmth of the wood. The front features a central drawer highlighted by superb gilt-bronze ornamentation depicting a lyre, palmettes, and laurel wreaths--an emblematic motif of the imperial aesthetic. The side supports are also embellished with perfectly matching decorative bronze mounts. The top is surmounted by a simple yet elegant dark gray marble (or hardstone) slab with straight edges, in excellent condition, which enhances the overall architectural lines. The solid lower rail ensures stability and visual balance, while reinforcing the console's majestic presence. The mahogany boasts a beautiful, warm, and luminous original patina, attesting to the quality of its craftsmanship and the care taken in its preservation. This Empire console table is distinguished by its harmonious proportions, the quality of its bronze mounts, and its understated yet monumental presence, making it ideal for an entryway, living room, or study with character.
