Description

We offer a large anatomical mannequin dating from the first half of the 20th century. This complete set is distinguished by its excellent state of preservation and the quality of its craftsmanship. Both the body and the organs are made of beautifully crafted antique plastic, entirely hand-painted, offering a harmonious and particularly decorative polychromy. Each organ bears original annotations, visible in the photos, corresponding to precise anatomical indications. The torso organs are all removable and attach using original wires, attesting to the authenticity of the set. Note that the heart opens in two parts; its interior is perfectly preserved (see photo). A rare object, as interesting from an educational standpoint as it is aesthetically pleasing, ideal for a cabinet of curiosities, a medical collection, or
