Description

Plagnet, 20th Century. Plagnet, a name that evokes the power and elegance of felines and antelopes from the 1930s, deserves to be rediscovered. His iconic work, his sculpted antelopes, is a true ode to wild beauty. Yet, little information circulates about this fascinating artist, apart from the fact that his sister, Marguerite, married the talented animal sculptor Maximilien Fiot. Plagnet's creations, whether majestic felines, graceful deer, or athletic greyhounds, capture movement with remarkable intensity. His technique, highlighting prominent musculature and taut postures, gives his works an undeniable strength. By placing them on trapezoidal platforms, he accentuates this dynamism, making them irresistible to Art Deco enthusiasts.
