Description

Elegant 18th-Century Dressing Table/Writing Desk. Rare and refined, this dressing table/writing desk, crafted from solid wood, dates from the 18th century and is in the Louis XV style. This ingenious piece is distinguished by its drop-front top, revealing a carefully compartmentalized interior, as well as a retractable mirror, allowing for a dual function as both a vanity and a work surface. It rests on slender, cabriole legs ending in sabots, lending great elegance to the whole. The front and sides open with small drawers and side shelves, offering ample discreet and practical storage. Beautiful antique patina, harmonious proportions, and quality craftsmanship attest to the skill of the 18th century. A rare and characterful piece, as decorative as it is functional, ideal for a classic
