Description

Excellent FASE Boomerang 2000 table lamp, designed by Luis Pérez de Oliva in the 1960s. The name "Boomerang" comes from the characteristic shape of the lamp's arm. It is equipped with two sockets and a diffuser that provides pleasant lighting. It is in perfect working order. It features a round, nickel-plated base, on which pivots a white lacquered metal arm ending in a ball joint, allowing the shade to rotate 180°. The shade, also nickel-plated, incorporates the switch on its rear edge. The FASE brand appears on the base. Made in Madrid, Spain. The piece shows signs of wear. Ideal as a lighting element, particularly for reading. A remarkable example of Spanish design.
