Description

Large Academic Drawing - Male Nude Study - Late 19th Century. Important academic drawing depicting a standing male nude, arms raised behind his head, in a studio pose intended for the study of volumes and muscular tension.

Description: The model is rendered with careful observation of anatomy: subtle transitions between light and shadow, supple hatching, and progressive modeling reveal a hand trained in the principles of academic drawing. Executed in charcoal or black pencil on paper, the work highlights the body's structure, with a marked contrast between the largely blurred background and the more precisely defined figure. The particularly well-executed face provides an expressive presence that balances the anatomical study. The overall effect evokes the exercises
