Description

A beautiful piece of folk art in turned and lacquered wood, likely originating from Rajasthan or Southeast Asia. This kohl or cosmetic pot has a characteristic bulbous shape, topped with a lid featuring a tall baluster handle. Its original polychromy, in warm tones of brick red, black, and ochre, is achieved with vegetable lacquer on the wheel. The object is distinguished by a superb patina of use and a network of old craquelure on the yellow section, attesting to its authenticity. Both graphic and historical, this display piece is ideal for a cabinet of curiosities or for decoration or collection of Asian art. In good used condition with a natural patina.
