Description

A demijohn (or carboy) is a large, rounded glass bottle, formerly used to store and transport liquids such as wine or oil. Here are its main characteristics: * Manufacturing: It is traditionally made of blown glass, which explains the frequent presence of small air bubbles and irregularities that give it its charm. * Modern use: Today, it has become a highly prized decorative object, used alone or as a vase for dried flowers or pampas grass. * Colors: Clear glass models are particularly appreciated for their understated elegance.
