

Sword-handled Corkscrew

220 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Bronze

Description

Antique piston and needle corkscrew, late 19th - early 20th century. The finely sculpted bronze handle depicts Saint Michael slaying the dragon, featuring rich symbolic iconography and high-quality decoration. The hollow needle mechanism allows the cork to be extracted by air pressure, an ingenious system sought after by collectors. Beautiful antique patina; a decorative object and curiosity, combining art, technology, and history.
