Description

An important and majestic bronze group , entitled "Love Seizing a Butterfly" , after the sculptor Antoine Denis Chaudet , cast by the prestigious Parisian art foundry "Maison Colin" , established in 1843 . This major work by the artist perfectly embodies the elegance and sensitivity of Neoclassicism . The sculptor depicts a delicately kneeling Cupid , who seems to want to caress , with one hand a butterfly , with the other a rose , symbols of fragility , love , and ephemeral beauty . He thus reveals a mixture of innocence and curiosity typical of the childhood of divinity . His posture , both playful and introspective , captures a moment of tender lightness and innocence . Antoine Denis Chaudet seeks to evoke emotions through refined aesthetics and undeniable technical mastery . Through this work , he invites
