by a clip on each side at the level of the chin straps and by a hook at its top to secure the straps. The rear band forms a point in its center, decorated with two branches of foliage with a central fleuron and bordered at the top and bottom by projecting moldings. On each side of the helmet, a two-pronged palm frond curling forward is attached (decree of January 16, 1815). The crest consists of a mask and two wings. The three sections are embossed with a series of feathers decreasing in size towards the rear, the upper part of which is cut into scallops. The lower section is decorated with a series of acanthus leaves; the lower end is folded outwards, scalloped, and attached to the helmet by four conical-headed brass screws with wing-like prongs. The plume holder is made of silvered brass with a tubular cross-section that tapers slightly towards the bottom. The chin straps, each consisting of a chin piece and a rosette, are made of leather covered in black velvet and adorned with a series of scales alternately cut into four or three scallops with chiseled edges. The chin straps are finished with a black cord (later replaced). The chin straps are approximately 16 cm long, 5.4 cm at their widest point, and approximately 1.6 cm at their narrowest. Embossed rosettes of a radiant sun, 6.5 cm high, 7.8 cm wide, with the sun's face finely embossed in the center, its back attached to a clasp that passes through the rosette, chin strap, and helmet bowl. Face height: 2 cm, face width: 2.6 cm. Scarlet horsehair mane mounted on a leather base and cut into a brush shape. Height: approximately 6 cm. The front point protrudes approximately 6 cm, height at the back: approximately 3.5 cm. Interior lining consisting of a waxed leather band topped with black silk. France. Restoration period. Very good condition, interior lining worn, original brush replaced.
