Description

The complexity of the history of the Italian republics in the Middle Ages is well known to historians. This sixteen-volume work, published at the beginning of the 19th century, provides a detailed account of the rivalries between the various city-states, the papacy, and external powers. Written by J. J.C. Simonde de Sismondi, a member of several European academies, this is the second French edition, published in Paris in 1818 by Treuttel and Wurzt. This complete set is bound in a charming and original period binding in good original condition (some minor wear, but nothing serious). The edges are stained green, adding a touch of refinement to the whole.
