Description
-------------

This large oriental ceremonial tray is much more than a simple decorative object: it is a work of art in its own right, a living testament to the excellence of 19th-century craftsmanship. Originating from Iran or Syria, two regions renowned for their expertise in damascening, this tray embodies luxury and refinement in every detail. Damascening, a technique thousands of years old, is mastered here to perfection. The tray is adorned with intricate silver and brass motifs, inlaid with remarkable precision. The metals are perfectly fitted, edge to edge, without the slightest imperfection, testifying to exceptional goldsmithing. Unlike pieces hastily produced for tourism, this tray is the product of demanding craftsmanship, where every curve and every motif tells a story. Its impressive diameter of 64.5 cm makes it a majestic piece, ideal for grand occasions or for enhancing any interior. Its finely crafted wood and mother-of-pearl base adds an extra touch of sophistication. Standing at 41.5 cm tall, it rises elegantly, drawing all eyes with its presence and noble bearing. The geometric and floral motifs, typical of oriental art, are engraved with a captivating finesse. Each element seems to dance across the surface of the tray, creating a play of light and shadow that highlights the richness of the materials. Silver and brass, combined with wood and mother-of-pearl, form a harmonious contrast, where luxury blends seamlessly with tradition. This tray is not merely an object: it is a heirloom, a collector's item that transcends centuries without losing its splendor. It is perfect for art lovers, collectors, or anyone seeking a unique piece, imbued with history and beauty. Give it pride of place in your home, and let it tell its story--a story of exceptional craftsmanship where every detail matters. For those passionate about authenticity and refinement, this tray is an invitation to travel through time and space, discovering an art that has stood the test of time without ever going out of style. Don't miss the opportunity to add this rare piece to your collection and bring a touch of oriental magic into your everyday life.
