Description

Pair of 18th-Century Armchairs - In Need of Restoration. An elegant pair of 18th-century armchairs, likely in the Louis XV style, crafted from finely carved natural wood. The backs are gently curved, the cabriole armrests rest on shaped supports, and the cabriole legs attest to the quality of the joinery characteristic of this period. The armchairs are currently upholstered in an antique floral fabric, showing visible wear, particularly on the seats (tears, sagging), requiring complete restoration of both the upholstery and the fabric. The wooden frames appear sound, with a beautiful original patina. Ideal for a restoration project, this pair will regain all its charm after restoration and would be perfectly suited to a classic or collector's interior.
