Description

Doll's or Demonstration Stove - Late 19th, Early 20th Century. This stove is made of sheet metal for the sides, iron for the legs and doors, cast iron for the hob and firebox, brass for its towel rail, and copper for the water tank lid. This model could have been a toy, as it is functional, or used as a shop demonstration, a scaled-down version of a larger kitchen. It was also used by traveling merchants. The doors and their reinforcements make it a very attractive piece. In perfect condition. Only the chimney, which was originally made of sheet metal, is missing; otherwise, it is complete and undamaged. Only the knob on the upper left door has been replaced (it is missing). Height 36.5 cm, width 43 cm, depth 26.5 cm, weight 8 kg
