Description

JAPAN - Edo Period (1603-1868). Stamped and finely engraved copper maedate depicting a dragon, the reverse also engraved with a design of clouds among which the dragon's body can be seen. Dimensions: 8.8 x 13 x 0.9 cm. Sold with its stand. Dimensions with stand: 18 x 13 x 5 cm. Notes: Among the samurai, the dragon is the embodiment of controlled power. A celestial creature linked to water, clouds, and the breath of life, it symbolizes a fluid force, capable of adapting without ever breaking. Unlike the destructive monster, the Japanese dragon is a guardian of balance, combining wisdom, courage, and spiritual authority. For the samurai, it represents the ideal of the accomplished warrior: mastering his violence to act with lucidity and honor.
