Description

Equestrian bronze "The Polo Player" by Joseph Cuvelier (1833-1870), c. 1860. Stamp of the Brussels art bronze foundry on the base: "H.LUPPENS ET CIE" for Henri Luppens & Company. Bronze with a brown patina. Missing: incomplete polo mallet. Joseph Cuvelier (1833-1870) was a French sculptor, best known for his animal works and his friendship with Edgar Degas, to whom he taught the basics of sculpture. He died during the Franco-Prussian War. His bronze works, particularly depictions of horses, are now held in museums such as the Musée d'Orsay. The foundry: Henri (or H.) Luppens & Cie was a renowned 19th-century Brussels art foundry specializing in the production of art bronzes. Based in Saint-Gilles, on rue de Danemark, this company was renowned
