Description

Gil Boys , painting by C.Tafuri , Italy 1930sAfter studying at the Academy of Fine Arts in Naples, he began painting, quickly attracting the attention of critics.

Well known between the 1920s and 1960s as a poster artist, postcard illustrator, and book illustrator, he often illustrated episodes of the Second World War and created a portrait of the then Crown Prince Umberto II of Savoy and Queen Elena of Montenegro. He enjoyed a long friendship and collaboration with the painter and photographer Maria Bertolani.[1]

Tafuri's painting, particularly well-known, depicts Carabinieri Vice-Sergeant Salvo d'Acquisto, immortalized while tearing off his shirt (there is a
