Description

An important Empire period clock in gilt and patinated bronze, early 19th century. This Empire period clock, crafted in gilt and patinated bronze, depicts a draped male figure in the antique style, seated in a meditative pose. This finely chiseled sculpture perfectly illustrates the neoclassical taste and the quality of early 19th-century French production. The circular white enamel dial with Roman numerals is framed by a richly decorated gilt bronze mount. The architecturally inspired base is lavishly adorned with relief decorations featuring mythological, vegetal, and animal motifs, resting on stylized feet. It features a mechanical movement with a striking bell, visible at the rear. The clock requires adjustment and setting to function correctly. It is presented on a veined marble base, lending elegance and
